Blitz Build: Home Builders Foundation constructs seven ramps in three days

Jason is a double amputee with spina bifida; George has progressive supranuclear palsy; Kathryn, who uses a scooter for mobility, has had to live in a nursing home for the last two years because she could not get in and out of her own home. These are a few of the individuals who were helped recently during the Home Builders Foundation's (HBF) Blitz Build.

In early October, members of metro Denver's home-building industry, which included building professionals, suppliers and volunteers, gathered to build seven ramps at seven homes for seven deserving individuals. After receiving an influx of applications from candidates throughout the metro-Denver area, the HBF selected seven families to be a part of its inaugural Blitz Build. Each recipient received a newly constructed ramp, free of charge, so they now have easier access in and out of their homes.

Thanks to the generous donations of materials from several companies, the HBF spent less than $1,100 to complete the ramps, which normally would have retailed for more than $17,000 collectively. All labor on the project was donated and included support from the builder captain's companies, including: Godden Sudik Architects, the Praise Church Mens group and nearly 50 individual volunteers.

"Our mission is to provide accessibility solutions to people with physical disabilities through the collaborated efforts of the home-building industry," said Beth Forbes, HBF program manager. "We're so very grateful for all our industry partners and volunteers who helped bring this project to life, and are delighted that we could help such deserving citizens in the metro-Denver area."

A spokesperson for the Davis family, of Brighton, said, "We're so appreciate for all you did for us. Brenda will be able to get in and out of the house so much easier. We can't thank you enough. Words will never cover it."

Forbes said the following companies provided builder captains free of charge to oversee the ramp construction projects: Aspen Basement Co., Bella Villa Builders (two ramps), Alpine Lumber, CR Gardner, ProBuild and Van Dyk Construction. In addition, OrePac supplied free decking materials on six ramps and Van Dyk Construction on one project. Lumber was donated by Builders Enterprise, Strait Lumber and Denver Lumber. Screws were donated by Blue Lynx.
